

Jeanine Nugent

Chief Operating Officer

Jeanine Nugent is a seasoned organizational leader with nearly three decades of experience across healthcare, technology, automotive and manufacturing industries. As HealthLock's Chief Operating Officer, Jeanine brings her extensive knowledge in strategic planning, information technology and operations to guide the company's product execution strategy and daily operations. She also serves as COO for HealthLock's parent company, inAssist.

Leveraging her robust background with enterprise-wide software application development and customer experience planning, Jeanine expertly combines technical know-how with business dynamics to bring ideas from the whiteboard to reality. Her leadership acumen, data-focused approach and passion for making a positive impact define her as a resolute leader who instigates change, aligning seamlessly with HealthLock's mission to revolutionize the healthcare landscape for the better.

Prior to joining HealthLock and inAssist, Jeanine served as a Director and Business Developer at Concannon Business Consulting, where she repeatedly had the highest sales and utilization of all directors. She also held several strategic positions at Toyota Motor Corporation. Her role as the Program Manager for the Enterprise Marketing Database marked a pioneering feat, creating a unified marketing database for all Toyota Motor Sales, USA brands. And as a member of Toyota's North American Reorganization Committee, she contributed to reorganizing the entire Information Systems department for the company. Further, Jeanine initiated Toyota's North American Parts Operation Strategy Summit, a model now adopted by Toyota Customer Services. Finally, during her tenure at Arthur Andersen Business Consulting, she led a process re-engineering and ERP system enhancement team, exemplifying her proficiency in complex problem-solving and technological application.

Jeanine earned a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration, Management Information Systems and Operations Management from the University of Arizona.

Exhibiting dedication beyond professional pursuits, Jeanine previously served as a volunteer Project Manager for Sharefest in Los Angeles. She's also a passionate advocate for animal welfare, having co-founded a dog rescue initiative that saved hundreds of animals.

Health conscious and a self-proclaimed foodie, Jeanine's personal interests include cooking, nutrition, exercise, wake surfing, exploring new cuisines and reading historical fiction.